

If you can't look at the picture, 'please help us face the problem.'

July 1990, Bari, S. Italy.

A horse is winched up through the decks by its hind legs. It is still alive, but only just. Its body, covered in wounds, was then dumped on the deck where it lay shaking until its death.

That horse was just one of 900 equines shipped from Argentina to Italy. Five died en route. (It is usually many more.) Many of those that did survive were in appalling condition.

For years now, British legislation has prevented our horses from suffering the same fate. But by 1992, that legislation is to be replaced by new EC regulations. Regulations which will make it legal to transport our equines for hundreds of miles for slaughter. The result is likely to be horrific. The ILPH are the leading international equine charity and we are fighting to retain legislation. Time is running out and we need your support now.

Thank you. Your support so far has helped us to;

- Inform, and gain the support of, British Government Ministers.
- Lobby successfully in Brussels. The EuroParliament has already voted with us. Now we must win the European Commission's vote.
- Fund major research into international horse transportation.
- Produce a video promoting the 1992 problem.
