A message for fur fighters

I have an urgent message for all of you leading the righteous fight against fur. I am pleased that many of you have been fighting valiantly, resorting to the necessary measures of verbal harassment, dousing fur coats in paint and general terrorization of the fur-wearing public. This is good, but it doesn't go far enough. Effective immediately you must all follow these rules:

Since cows are animals too, you must immediately stop wearing leather articles. No more leather shoes, belts or gloves for you. While you're at it, stop wearing wool also; after all, do you think those poor little sheep like it when they are cruelly held down for shearing?

You must stop eating animal foods of all kinds. No more beef, pork, fish, chicken or eggs. Get a vegetarian cookbook. No exceptions.

I command you to stop using any medicines that were developed using animals in their tests (this includes 99 percent of all medicines). Some of you may want to make sure your will is in order first. Of course, cosmetics tested on animals are strictly forbidden.

I demand that you use the same enforcement techniques to uphold these rules that you presently use to enforce your no-fur dictate. Certainly, paint can ruin a good pair of leather shoes too, and since we have righteousness on our side it is our duty to tell everyone else what to do. . . .
